

Interview and Interrogation

Our primary purpose is to enhance the investigator's ability to develop rapport, facilitate communication, extract more accurate information, detect deception and obtain the TRUTH from every investigative inquiry.

One should take steps to be better prepared to conduct effective interviews and successful interrogations. Be cognizant of how the color environment effects your interviews. Know what is the best way to set up your interview room for conducting an interrogation. What can you do to be better prepared to conduct your interviews and interrogations in the interview room and on the street.

- Personality typology
- Human bias influences
- Building rapport
- Managing the environment
- Human Defense Mechanism
- Body Language
- Effective use of territory and zones
- Etc

This course is designed to enable police professionals to enhance their ability to gain information and determine the truth through the interview and interrogation process. Skills are taught to enable detection of deception by analysis of non-verbal and verbal communication. Interview and Interrogation is a 5-day course.

Instruction is broken down into the following blocks: Human bias influences, personality identification, using personality to build rapport, personality typology

L.I.O.N. Organizational Development Institute

theme development, human defense mechanisms, emotional responses, gathering data, detecting deception, systematic interviewing, the interrogation process, formulation and types of questions, verbal communication, exploration of deception detection, deceptive techniques, body language, subconscious rapport building, body language for the interrogator, effective use of territory and zones.